COUNCIL PASS RESOLUTION TO COVER; PENSION
IS APPROVED

Following is a record of the proceedings of the Wainwright Town Council at its regular meeting in the Council chamber on Tuesday, the 15th day of March.

The members of Council present at this meeting were Mayor Forster and Councillors Robinson, Welch, McLeod, Patterson, Loudfoot and Courcier.

The recorded proceedings of Council held on March 1st, 1932, were read and, on motion, were adopted and confirmed as written.

The Old Age Pensions Department sought the disposition of Council on the application of Mr. Andrew J. Simmerman for pension.

On motion, the approval of Council was given with respect to the payment of pension to Mr. Simmerman. Mrs. Mary Steel wrote Council relative to the impossible condition of Seventh Avenue, East of Main Street, requesting that attention be given to remedy this condition.

On motion, action, on the request of Mrs. Steel, was deferred for the time being.

A requisition, from the Wainwright municipal hospital for $1500 for the year A.D. 1932, was presented in a communication from Mr. J. W. Stuart, secretary-treasurer of the hospital.

On motion, the requisition was filed for future action and permission granted for the payment of the first quarterly installment at the end of the present month.

The Department of Child Welfare for the province of Alberta gave notice of a reduction of 10 per cent in the amount, chargeable to the Town of Wainwright, under the Mothers Allowance, effective March 1st.

On motion, this communication was ordered filed.

Mrs. Ada Latch wrote requesting financial assistance in the purchasing of groceries for the maintenance of herself and family.

On motion, the Secretary-Treasurer was authorized to instruct Mrs. Latch to call upon the Town Solicitor for the purpose of executing an agreement to compensate the town for financial assistance given.

The Police committee submitted the following report which was, on motion, accepted and incorporated in the proceedings:

We desire to express our satisfaction with the very able manner in which Corporal Collett superintended the interests of our town in the preservation of order on Saturday afternoon and evening of last week on the occasion of the very large influx to the town for the purpose of listening to the addresses of Mr. J. J. Maloney.

The exemplary conduct of the large number, who accompanied Mr. Maloney on his visit, greatly assisted the police in what might otherwise have been an arduous task.

We would recommend that the Secretary-Treasurer be requested to convey to Corporal Collett and, through him, to those who assisted him, the appreciation of Council for the very considerable service rendered on this occasion.

On motion, Council was regularly adjourned.

MANY WILD ANIMALS HAUNT WESTERN PARK

Riding Mountain National Park in Central Manitoba promises to become one of the most remarkable natural zoos in the world. Although there are no cages in the whole 1,400 square miles of its extent, visitors may make personal acquaintance with all kinds of Canadian wild life including several assorted varieties of bear, moose, deer, beaver, marten and even buffalo, a small herd of these rugged animals having been transferred to the park from Wainwright, Alberta. In the park are also found some 3,000 elk, the largest herd in Canada, and almost any morning early, visitors may see bands of these magnificent creatures browsing casually among the lush marsh grasses that border the smaller lakes. The golf course on Clear Lake has been further conditioned for the coming summer and tourist facilities improved. With the Canadian National Railways within easy striking distance, Riding Mountain Park becomes one of the most accessible playgrounds for residents of the Prairies and western Ontario.

RICH GOLD DEPOSIT AT THREE DUCK LAKE

What is probably the richest surface showing of gold bearing ore disclosed in recent years has been uncovered during the past few weeks at Three Duck Lake, which lies in northern Ontario just west of Nakaw station on the main line of the Canadian National Railways. Samples of ore, shipped out for assay by the Canadian Government Department of mines and by other assayers, run from $100 to $114 a ton. The richness of the ore is emphasized by the fact that the average gold content of the famous Porcupine area is less than $10 a ton. According to the Natural Resources Department of the Canadian National Railways the present ore body occurs in a belt of sedimentary rocks of pre-Huronian age, the geology of the district being very similar to that encountered at Kirkland Lake and other important gold areas of the Dominion.

MR JAMES WILSON ENTERS GREAT BEYOND

Mr. Jas. (Jim) Wilson, head herdsman at the cattle branch of the National Park service, under control of the Dominion department of agriculture, passed away at his home in the cattle reserve on Tuesday morning, cause of death being heart trouble. He was in his 55th year.

The deceased, who has been suffering since last August, was born in England, and came to Canada with his parents when a young boy, settling in the Boissevain, Man. district. He came to Wainwright in 1917, and joined the National Park staff as a rider. Later he was made herdsman at the cattle branch under the experimental farms branch of the department.

He leaves to mourn, in addition to his wife, three sons, Robert, Frederick and James, and to all of these the sympathies of a large circle of friends and acquaintances goes out in their bereavement.

The funeral is to be held at St. Thomas' (Ang.) church on Thursday afternoon at 2.30.

ALBERTA FIRE LOSSES HIGH IN FEBRUARY

Alberta had the second largest fire loss of any province in the Dominion during February, the total loss being $536,200 as compared to $167,000 during February, 1931. Quebec had the largest fire loss for the month, according to estimates made recently by the Monetary Times. Loss in Canada during the month amounted to $3,981,950 as compared with $4,689,325 for the corresponding period of last year.

CAN. NATIONAL RLWS. WEEKLY NEWS ITEMS

COBALTITE SHIPPED FROM ONTARIO MINE

The first shipment of cobaltite from the cobalt mines at Werner Lake, Ontario, left Minaki over Canadian National Railways a few days ago, consigned to a refinery at Cincinnati, Ohio, and a second car of this valuable ore is now being loaded. Although the Werner Lake property, situated forty miles north of Minaki is rich in deposit, transportation of the ore to the railroad is a difficult problem. In summer, five or six portages make the water journey a laborious proposition and, in winter, owing to the swift currents, the rivers never freeze sufficiently to permit safe passage. The property is owned and operated by Kenora Prospector & Miners Ltd., with headquarters at Toronto.

CROP ROTATION BENEFITS

As expressed by E. S. Hopkins, Dominion Field Husbandman of the Department of Agriculture "the chief advantages of crop rotation consist in maintaining the productivity of the land at a higher level, in distributing the farm labour more uniformly throughout the season, and in controlling more effectively weeds, insects, and fungous diseases. Crop rotation is the growing of different crops upon the same land in a definite order and in recurring succession."

PROVOST POWER MANAGER MOVES

W. Shearer, local manager for the Calgary Power company, is under orders to move to Wainwright, and work in the power house at that point, April 1. There is no word of any successor being placed here and as the company's telephone is being cancelled, the inference is that no repair or trouble man will be kept here. The nearest repair man will be H. E. Riley at Hardisty who will cover the territory between that point and Macklin. D. Martin, whose present headquarters are at Killarney, is understood to be taking the supervision of the lines through Sedgewick and Loughheed from Riley's post, in order to enable the latter to cover the ground from Hardisty to Macklin.—Provost News.

DOINGS IN THE LEGISLATURE

EDMONTON, March 21.—Interest in the legislature this week has centred mainly around two debates, one on the income tax bill and the other on the proposed cut in the indemnities for members.

The week has seen George H. Webster, veteran liberal leader right back in his old form. He led the attack on the income tax bill and in this received strong support from W. R. Howson and both labor and conservative benches.

Mr. Webster went one better than Premier Brownlee's resolution proposing a cut of 10 per cent. in the indemnities by moving an amendment putting the reduction at 25 per cent.

R. M. McCool, U.F.A., Cochrane, then moved a subamendment to reduce all seasonal indemnities to $1200 but with $600 for traveling expenses to rural members.

Mr. Webster pointed out that times were not normal and the speech from the throne had plainly said that members must do their share to help in retrenchment. The legislature was going to ask the people to assume severe tax burdens and it was only fair that members should set an example. He thought men who sought to impose new taxation at this time should do their share in no uncertain terms.

W. E. Payne, conservative, Red Deer, gave strong support to the liberal amendment, while Dr. H. W. McGill, conservative, Calgary, favored the original motion of Premier Brownlee.

A. M. Matheson U.F.A., Vegreville, supported the subamendment intimating that he would go so far as to reduce indemnities to $1000 with traveling expenses for rural members.

Fred J. White, labor leader, opposed any such drastic cuts as those suggested by the amendment and sub amendment.

Mr. Webster questioned the fairness of taking away the service tax from the cities in order that the government might impose an income tax.

W. R. Howson, supporting his leader's attack on the bill, declared that in these times no new tax should be imposed if it could be avoided. He quoted a total of four successful deficits when no income tax was imposed. He did not think the tax at this time was justified. He had a Continued on Page Five

LITTLE BROWN JUG CARRIES HISTORIC WATER TO NEW SHIP

Water from the well from which Evangeline oft-times had recourse to replenish the household supply was taken from that historic well at Grand Pre, Nova Scotia, put into a brown jug, and transported to Newport News, Virginia, where it was used in christening the new 10,000-ton steamer "Acadia," latest addition to the Eastern Steamships Lines service between New York and Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, the ceremony taking place at Newport News. As the jug contained nothing but water, and historic water at that, it was not anticipated that any undue delay would result in its journey across the border. The new liner will be put in to service this summer and will be an added attraction for United States tourists to visit the south shore of Nova Scotia, Canada National Railways trains making direct connection with the steamer at Yarmouth.

JOHN McCORMACK COMES TO THEATRE

John McCormack has made a distinguished entry into the talkies in his first screening of the Fox feature "Song of my heart" which will show at the theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday next.

In this McCormack debut is a most adroit piece of showmanship bringing this master of the concert platform to the screen in a production which affords ample opportunity for the display of his extraordinary talent. And in addition to this, "Song of My Heart," under the magic touch of Frank Borzage, has become an appealing sentimental tale with high moments of heart interest, as well as a great deal of effective comedy.

The story is laid in the Ireland of beauty, tradition and sentiment. Surrounding Mr. McCormack are a group of excellent players and in addition, in parts of principal characters are Maureen O'Sullivan, a fresh and winsome girl from Ireland, and also a boy, Tom Clifford, likewise an importation. Maureen O'Sullivan so effectively registers that there is no doubt she will be heard from in the future. The boy contributes importantly to the humor of the picture. Kerrigan and Macdonald, as a pair of Irish village characters are altogether delightful.

Through the picture McCormack sings the following songs: "A Fairy Story by the Fireside," "Just for Today," "I Feel You Near Me," "Then You'll Remember Me," "Ireland, Mother Ireland," "Kitty, My Darling," "I Hear You Calling Me," "Little Boy Blue," "A Pair of Blue Eyes."

The voice of McCormack in all its sweetness, appeal and tonal excellence has been given in this production perfect recording.

REFUSE CHANGE IN TRUCK TAXES

C.M.A. OBJECTIONS TO NEW LEVIES TURNED DOWN BY PREMIER BROWNLEE

EDMONTON—There will be no reduction in the new corporation taxes nor on truck taxes on commercial delivery vehicles, Hon. J. E. Brownlee informed a delegation of the Alberta branch, Canadian Manufacturers' Association which awaited on the cabinet.

The delegation which was headed by H. Hutchings of Calgary, expressed the belief that there was considerable danger involved in increasing beyond absolute necessity provincial and municipal debts and in increasing taxes of various kinds.

Mr. Brownlee stated that it was the intention of the government to carry out the provisions of the regulations now in effect and carefully study results until next year when the questions of taxation of trucks and freight vehicles would again be considered.

On the ground that levy of heavy corporation taxes would discourage initiative and be detrimental to Alberta industry, objection was lodged to the triple tax that would come with a new Alberta income tax. The premier stated that the increase in the corporation tax would stand and also the corporation schedule in the new Income Tax Act.

When emptying a can of semi-solid foodstuff, it is a good idea to turn the can upside down and punch a hole in the bottom to enable air to enter. You will find that the contents will slide much more freely after this is done.

MONEY DUE

Horsion peered cautiously about in an effort to locate the man who was talking. Ah, there he was! It was one Burton Alkers, until a day or two previously, head convict clerk in the prison offices. And the man with whom Alkers was conversing was held Dan Weaver, proprietor of the pool hall. It was obvious that neither Weaver nor Alkers was aware that Horsion was sitting less than four feet from them, concealed behind the imitation palm.

Alkers was speaking. "No Dan, I'm not open to any sort of racket. Five years in the stir is plenty for me. I am going straight. I am going back to the finest, most loyal little woman in the world—my wife. She stuck to me all the time I was doing my stretch, and she's waiting for me to come home. Why, she even rustled up a job for me as bookkeeper in the offices of a big city lumber company."

"Well, you sure couldn't turn down a woman like that, Alkers," said Weaver. "And I ain't going to urge you any more to get back into the crook game. I was only offerin' a helpin' hand by tellin' you of a little job I have in mind."

"Sure, I understand," replied Alkers. "And I'm grateful too. But after I have several more drinks—my last fling—then, tomorrow morning I'm off for the old home town and the wife."

"And you're doing the wise thing too," encouraged Weaver. "But I never knew you had a wife, Alkers."

"Finest wife in the whole world. Here's her picture." Alkers drew an expensive white-gold watch from his pocket, unwrote the back and passed it over to Weaver. Pasted on the inner side of the circular back was a small photo of a woman. "She put the photo there herself, the day I was handed the stretch in stir," Alkers further informed the proprietor of the speakeasy. "For more than three years, the watch was in the safe in the warden's office at the prison. Then, when I was made a clerk in the office, they allowed me to carry it. From then on, until was discharged day before yesterday, I looked at that picture every day and swore I'd never pull another crook job. I wish though, I could crave liquor all the time."

Because he could not move without being discovered by Alkers or Weaver, Squint Horsion was unable to get more than a fleeting glimpse of the watch. However, that one glance convinced him that the watch was worth at least thirty-five dollars. And since it was evident that Alkers had already consumed considerable liquor, and was quite likely to partake of a good deal more before night, Horsion reasoned that it would not require a great deal of dexterity to 'touch' the former convict clerk for the timepiece. The proceeds from such a touch should certainly satisfy his sister Anna, for a week or two, anyway.

For fourteen hours, Horsion tarried about the speakeasy keeping an eye on Alkers, who, having drunk a great deal of liquor in that time, had become helplessly intoxicated.

It was nine o'clock 'at night when Alkers finally staggered out the back door of Weaver's place of business and wandered erratically up a quiet side street.

Squint Horsion followed, never losing sight of his intended victim, but at the same time making quite sure that neither he nor Alkers were being observed by the policeman.

Several blocks from the speakeasy Alkers entered a cheap lodging house and, with considerable difficulty, due to the overload of bootleg liquor, negotiated the stairs to the first floor. Horsion trailed along, warily, quietly. There was no one at the night desk at the head of the stairs nor was any one encountered in the hallway.

Alkers, entirely unaware that he was being watched, entered a room which he had engaged earlier in the day. Horsion noted the number on the door then quietly crept downstairs and left the house. Across the street from the lodging house, he waited in the darkened entrance way of a small grocery store. For half an hour, he waited and watched.

Then making sure that no policeman or detectives were about, the ex-convict crossed the street and re-entered the lodging house. Several minutes later, with the aid of a pass-key, he was in Alkers' room, where Alkers was slumbering heavily.

The burglar fumbled about in the darkened room and found the sleeping man's clothes on the floor. A hasty search of the pockets brought forth the white-gold watch, several bank notes and some loose silver.

It was an easy 'touch' and, a half hour after Horsion had made it, he was in his squalid room at his sister's home.

Presently, the irascible sister entered the room. "Well," she snapped peremptorily, "d'd you bring home some money?"

Without a murmur, the ex-convict reduced the cash proceeds of his decent burglary, amounting to seventeen dollars and forty cents and handed it to the scowling woman. No need to let her know that he had the white gold watch which he intended to dispose of later and keep the money for himself.

"Is that all you have?" Anna demanded, peering at him with pale blue eyes in which was a great deal of suspicion and distrust.

"Ain't that enough?" snarled Horsion. "It's all I got! Now get out and leave me alone!"

"I think you're a liar!" was the lady's ungracious remark. "You're holding out on me!" However, she turned about and left the room.

It was while Horsion, a few minutes later, was inspecting the fine white-gold watch that an idea took root in his brain and began to grow.

A very accurate description of that watch, Mr. Horsion knew, was in the property book at the prison. Suppose that watch were picked up by a detective at the scene of a crime—burglary, for example—what would happen? Why the owner of the watch would be trailed down by the dicks and arrested as the perpetrator of the crime committed at the place where the watch was found! And if the owner of the ticker happened to be an ex-convict—well, he would have a lot of explaining to do, especially if he was unable to prove that he was somewhere else other than at the place where the burglary, for example, was committed, at the time aforesaid burglary was committed.

Burton Alkers, now, he would have a tough time, so Horsion reasoned, to prove that he was in his room at the lodging house when a certain job was pulled—burglary of a junk dealer's home, for example—if that burglary should take place sometime before the morning!

Why, it was a cinch! Alkers certainly couldn't sleep off that drunk in less than eight hours!

A fine watch too, to 'lose' while prowling the old junk dealer's home. But that nice bunch of 'jack in the glass jar' under the old guy's floor was a far better prize. Pretty tough for Alkers of course. But then Squint Horsion easily convinced himself that he didn't like Alkers anyway.

Horsion glanced at the small clock on a chair near the head of his bed. Half past ten! The best time to attempt the burglary of the junk dealer's house would be between two and three o'clock in the morning. Cops on the beat get tired and kind of careless between two and three in the morning.

A half hour more, the ex-convict devoted to considering every angle of the proposed burglary. Then, having made a definite decision, he set the alarm on the small clock at one thirty turned off the light, and lay down on the bed, fully dressed, for the short sleep. He had learned from experience that several hours of complete relaxation before pulling a burglary job, always steadied a guy's nerves.

At the first tinkle of the alarm at half past one, Horsion awoke, grabbed the clock and shut off the alarm. Then, for five minutes, he lay quietly in the dark room and listened. He wished, if possible, to get out of the house without his sister knowing that he had departed. Anna slept in another room across the kitchen from Horsion's chamber. If he could put over this one nice job without Anna knowing about it, he would not have to give her a cut of it.

No sound came to his ears. He then quietly arose, and without turning on the light in the room, slipped out and made his way to his sister's door where he listened intently. Always a heavy sleeper, the woman was now snoring lustily.

Nonetheless, the ex-convict tiptoed across the kitchen to a hallway, then on to the front door, and a moment later he stepped out into the dark night and closed and locked the door.

Like a flitting shadow, Horsion travelled dark streets and darker alleys and at two o'clock, was once more in the lodging house wherein slept the victim of his last burglary—Burton Alkers. It was a wise precaution that of making sure that Alkers was asleep in his room. And so Horsion found him, in profound, drunken slumber.

Now to the home of the junk dealer who kept his savings in a glass jar under the floor!

So vigilant and furtive was the ex-convict that not a single policeman or detective saw him as he made his way to the ramshackle dwelling of the old man. A window latch in the rear of the shack gave way almost noiselessly to the burglar's jimmy. Horsion knew how to handle the implement in the most approved manner.

Silent as a shadow, the prowler made his way to the old man's room. The old-fashioned lock on the door responded readily to one of a number of latchkeys which the prowler carried.

All went well until Horsion stepped into the room. Then the junk dealer stirred restlessly in his bed and suddenly sat bolt upright. "Who's there?" he gasped, apparently half paralyzed with fear.

Two large hands suddenly closed about the old fellow's scrawny neck. Horsion wished to lose some evidence of a struggle; and the old junkman elected to struggle. In spite of his age, he threw himself about with such frenzy that he fell out of the bed.

Horsion allowed his victim to kick and squirm about on the floor for a time, then he brought to an end the uneven fight by the simple expedient of tapping the junk dealer on the head with a billy. The old man gasped, went limp and lay unconscious.

The burglar quickly darted to one corner of the room, and with the aid of a small electric torch found the loose floor board. With one hand he groped about under the floor, found the glass jar and brought it forth. One quick flash of the light revealed the money in the jar. He extinguished the light, and a moment later transferred the money to his coat pocket. As he wore thin, s'ken gloves he did not have to worry about finger prints.

Now for the clue on to which the investigating detectives would drop like hungry wolves—the watch. In the darkness Horsion drew the watch from his vest pocket and dropped it, face down, on to the floor. He heard the faint tinkle of fine glass as the crystal broke and scattered.

At fifteen minutes to four Horsion was back in his room at sister's home. He had buried the money at the foot of a small tree in the back yard, and had carefully obliterated all signs of digging by covering the spot with dry leaves. When the unlucky Burton Alkers had been safely sucked away in prison for another stretch, for a crime he did not commit, Horsion told himself, he would dig up the money.

Anna did not awaken when her burglar brother softly unlocked the door and sneaked into his room. She was sleeping peacefully as he undressed and went to bed. Before going to sleep, however, he allowed his mind to go back over every move of the night. It was a very fine piece of work, he told himself. For example, how many prowlers would have remembered to have handled Alkers watch in such a way that finer prints left on it by Alkers would not be disturbed. And, too, Mr Horsion had been very, very careful not to leave any of his own finer prints on the timepiece. Yes! It was an excellent piece of work.

Three days passed; Horsion remained at home. Though his sister frequently shot quizzical looks in his direction he was not at all worried. Her peculiar behaviour, he decided, was no doubt due to the fact that he was, for the first time since leaving prison, making a lot of necessary repairs on the place. He voluntarily repaired the fence which had fallen down in many places; he painted the small garage; he cleaned up the back yard; he also pruned the few small trees in the yard and trimmed the scrubby rose bushes.

And while so conscientiously engaged in these homey tasks he also watched the newspapers closely. One small item concerning the burglary of the junk-dealer's home had appeared in one of the papers. The investigation officers had announced, too, that they had one excellent clue which undoubtedly would lead to the burglar.

Again, Mr Horsion told himself that Burton Alkers was certainly in for a lot of hard luck.

On the afternoon of the fourth day after the burglary, two heavy-jowled, narrow-eyed detectives from headquarters called on Mr Horsion. He met them at the front door.

"Well, Horsion," said one of the sleuths, "we finally found out from the prison authorities, incidentally, who owned the watch that was lost in the old junk dealer's house carry last Friday morning."

"Yeah!" said Squint Horsion. "What junk dealer? What watch? And what has all this got to do with me, anyhow?"

"Only that it is your watch," replied the dick. "You evidently lost it while you were manhandling the junk dealer; before you knocked him out with a sap and took his jar of money."

"My watch?" gasped the burglar. "What are you guys talking about? What junk dealer? What watch?"

"Your watch, Horsion. This watch" And the detective brought forth from his pocket Squint Horsion's old familiar silver timepiece.

The burglar's eyes bulged. He gulped several times, then opened his big mouth to say something but could think of nothing to say.

At that moment Anna emerged out of the kitchen. She looked the detectives over belligerently. "What's all this fuss about?" she demanded.

The detective who held the watch surreptitiously dropped it into his pocket. "No fuss at all, ma'am," said he. "We are merely arresting this man. And who," he asked, might you be?"

"I might be a fairy princess," snapped Anna, "but it happens that I ain't. I am that man's sister," she

HAPPY MEDIUM!Several decades ago there was an expression often used, "Children should be seen and not heard," and in the majority of well regulated families this custom of keeping the children "in their place" was adhered to.
Many of the older generation realize that they have been handicapped by the observance of it and they could have lived fuller lives had they had some of the freedom of speech and action enjoyed by and encouraged in the youth of the present day.But is there not a danger that we are now pandering to youth too much that the pendulum has swung to the opposite extreme to that of a generation ago? Is it not possible we are catering to, pampering and flattering the youth of today, more than is good for them? "There is a medium in all things."—Ex.THE BARD WAS RIGHT!"Truly these be troublous times!" as bluff King Hal was made to say by the immortal bard, and yet such a statement hardly begins to cover the troubles which arise almost daily in this twentieth century. This is especially true of the troubles of the small town newspaperman, and all of which leads us to rise and remark that troubles never come singly!Each week for over twenty years past, The Star has appeared in the fully to chronicle events of the district, and we have no doubt that the constantly increasing numbers of readers have looked forward to enjoying the contents thereof. However, after so long a service, it would appear that the privilege of gaining the news and views of the countryside is short-lived in the minds of a number of our subscribers.To be deprived of this means of learning the happenings and strivings of the community and to receive the message of savings to be attained from the several merchants of our town (as well as to lose the opportunity of boosting the whole district through its local mouthpiece, The Star) may indeed prove to be a material loss as well as the loss of pleasurable knowledge and intercourse.With this in mind, we feel it is only right and proper that we make a serious attempt to retain the loyalty of The Star's subscribers through their financial interest in its welfare to the extent of the small price ne-has meant much to the progress and betterment of The Star as a weekly newspaper, as has also that feeling of confidence created by those who have expressed their intention to pay as soon as they can, but a feeling of doubt is left when no move is made by those who will neither settle their such is not done.Look at your label and notice when the annual subscription is due to be (Too late for last week)

The Editor:

Dear Sir:—Canada is a law-abiding country and Wainwright is a law-abiding community, yet any one who happened to be at the C.N.R. station, at Wainwright, on a recent Wednesday night would not think so. On that occasion, J. J. Maloney, a speaker of pronounced religious views, was arriving in Wainwright to deliver a series of lectures. A crowd of misguided people of an opposite view from the speaker, had collected on the station platform, to prevent him from entering town. No doubt they did not realize, at the time, that they were committing a serious offense against another Canadian citizen.On the afternoon of March 15th, this same speaker returned to Wainwright, on a special train, accompanied by a large number of his supporters. On this occasion there was no disturbance at the station. The speaker addressed two crowded meetings at the theatre, and although the town was full of people of all religious beliefs, there was no disturbance of any kind. Wainwright was again the law-abiding community.At least 98 per cent of the citizens of this community are good solid law-abiding people, regardless of their religious beliefs, proud of this town and her good name. Each one realizes his duty as a citizen of Wainwright and of Canada. Whether he agreed with the views of the speaker or not, he knew that he was within his rights, in coming here and delivering his address, and thus was entitled to our protection and courtesy.The splendid attitude of the men who accompanied the speaker from Edmonton, was most commendable, and the excellent way in which the police and town officials handled a rather delicate situation, could not have been improved on.The advisability of such a speaker holding meetings of this nature, in a mixed community the size of Wainwright, is a debatable question, and will not be considered here. The main thing to consider is that we are all "Neighbors" in Wainwright, and must be "Tolerant" one with the other. We must intermingling socially and in business. Our children grow up together, study together, play together. Our next door neighbor may be of different religious beliefs, or political leanings, but that is his business; and if he is "A man" he minds his own business, and is still a good neighbor.In these times of depression, we need our good neighbors. Their cheery words of encouragement and the helping hand is always appreciated. The thoughtless actions of a few irresponsible people, laid the foundation for splitting our community into factions, but the excellent handling of the situation on Saturday has done much to bridge that gap.Let us not forget that harmony, not discord, law not disorder, help not hindrance, co-operation, not individualism, is good word for our neighborhood. A good word for our neighbor not a bad one, tolerance for one another and not intolerance, will make Wainwright a happier and a more prosperous community to live in. By living as good neighbors we can give the best that is in us, and get the best that is in others. "Seth Parker"and "The Old Singing Master" have the right idea.

CITIZEN.

Wainwright.

The Editor,

Dear Sir:—In last week's issue of your paper there appeared a letter pertaining to town affairs, but specifically addressed to me.I cannot think that the best interests of the community can be served by entering into a debate on "Religion as a Science" or "The relative merits of religious doctrines", and so I disclaim it.The Council is at present concerned with the economy of the welfare of the town of Wainwright and community at large.We are all concerned with the problem of maintaining life, securing food, clothing, housing, meeting expenses of daily life—the mortgage and taxes.We are very much aware that we are passing through an economic crisis, and that only by co-operating, each protecting the interests of the other, can we make the shock less severe. When shall the crisis pass?
Who would care to foretell our future if the upturn does not soon appear? What if on top of this we should have a crop failure? We have had them before; they do recur.In my practice I am continually in touch with the needy, those in pain, many without means. Their creed or nationality are things apart, they suffer alike and must be treated alike.
Through the Council I meet respectable citizens without means, looking for work, for help, for food. If man falls in the first requisites of life, that is, to feed, clothe and house himself, he perishes. These things I know; we all know; we are in actual contact with them; unless we lead a sheltered life apart, a life protected by the sacrifices of others.There has never been a hint of community-splitting until the last two years or so, and the Council, by approval of the referred-to, resolution, were attempting to halt anything of that nature.I am of French origin and proud of it, and have many good friends among the French Canadians, and I do not like to feel that through any party's overzealousness we are forced into strained relationship.Through all these years we citizens of Wainwright and district have had common pleasures and interests—Protestants patronizing Roman Catholic church suppers, card parties, etc., and Roman Catholics have reciprocated when the Protestants held their church affairs. Why attempt to change all these friendly and happy relationships; for is there not bound to be a difference in feeling in a town of this size if this attempt at the establishment of a separate school is continued?Our children are growing up now with love and friendly feelings for one another. If we separate them and they have no school contact one with another will not a feeling of animosity and distrust grow up between them? As it is now, they play together, are educated together, are happy in their friendships, the only difference being (and it is a respected difference on both sides) they are attending different religious organizations.If the lack of religious training is felt in the present public school, could not an even more concentrated effort be made on the children's training in the Church and in the individual home?If our town were a larger centre, the establishment of a separate school would be a different matter. If our town had not been swept by the disastrous fire of 1925 followed immediately by the present depression, causing our citizens and our Council the utmost concern, (lest our tax burden mount, and our ability to pay be reduced) the cause for concern on the part of the Council would be lessened.
These are indeed days when we should all co-operate to meet the common issue and bring our town and district safely through this depression.By sane, safe administration our bonded indebtedness is being reduced.
Can this continue if our town taxes are raised? We have reason to believe more taxes are in sight, both federal and provincial.Can a dual system of schooling be carried on as economically as one?
Would it help to reduce our taxes?
Would it help to give us heart that we might bear each others burdens?
I greatly fear not. I point to the disastrous results obtained by the establishment of a separate school in small districts now unable to support them, such as Chauvin and Biggar.
The towns, the districts, the children, all suffered, and Catholics and Protestants alike in these districts now see and realize the mistake. Let us take heed in time!The Council wishes to do everything in its power for the welfare of the community as a whole; to obtainthe maximum results—the citizens of the town and of the district must put forth a united front.It was in such good faith that the referred-to resolution was moved by me and passed by the Council. The Council singly and severally are entirely responsible for the passing of any motions or resolutions through Council and I would respectfully submit that any criticism of the Council in its administration should be directed at the Council as a whole.

H. L. COURSIER.

NIAGARA CHALLENGEKeen rivalry exists between Niagara Falls, in Canada, and her taller, less majestic sister, Kaletour Falls in British Guiana. Until recently Niagara Falls alone drew the big crowds and Kaletour was left almost neglected. In fact few people knew that Kaletour is five times higher than Niagara. Kaletour is not beyond the limit of modern travel. Three days of delightful river travel from Georgetown, capital of British Guiana, brings one to the foot of the mighty cataract, world's highest.

FARMER WRITES US

ON ELECTION PROMISES

The Editor,

Wainwright Star.

Looking over the press clippings as reported on promises by Hon. R. B.

Bennett, present Prime Minister of this unfortunate country of ours,

Canada, also the press reports since

Mr. Bennett became head of the government. Here they are, dear fellows read carefully, wake up.

"After I am Prime Minister on July 28th I will see that my promises are carried out, or the government will go out of power trying to do so

(Election speech June 16th, 1930.)

"If the party I belong to on the 28th day of July is given authority to conduct the affairs of this country, at the first session of our parliament the government of which I am the head will pass laws that will give Canadians an equal opportunity with their competitors outside of Canada, or will be out of power." (Election speech June 10th, 1930.)

"Mr. King promises consideration of the problem of unemployment. I promise to end unemployment. Which plan do you like best?" (Election speech June 10th, 1930.)

"I told my audience in Winnipeg and I tell you here and now, that unemployment condition I will not permit to continue in this country." (Election speech, 1930.)

"Government can regulate policies of the country, so that facilities may be provided to give employment, and not make it necessary for thousands to leave home and go elsewhere to get jobs to make a living." (Election speech, June 17th, 1930.)

"Is there any money for Canada to have hard times if the government is discharging its duties as it should?" (Election speech June 16th, 1930.)

"It is true that we have foreign markets, and as I said the other evening, we will blast a way to those markets on a world-wide basis with any exportable surplus. We do not have to worry about that." (Election speech, June 17th, 1930.)

"So will I, when the government is mine, continue to blast a way through all our troubles and difficulties." (Election speech, June 17th, 1930.)

"Listen, you farmers, on Isten, you farmers from the West and all other parts of Canada, you have been taught to mock at tariffs and applaud free trade. Tell me, when did free trade fight for you? You say tariffs are only for the manufacturers. I will make them fight for you as well

I will use them to blast a way into the markets that have been closed to you." (Election speech, 1930.)

"Someone is responsible for unemployment, not individuals, but governments; governments by their majorities in Parliament are responsible for enacting all legislation." (Election speech, July 16th, 1930.)

"In this country, as in other countries, the government cannot do everything. Your problems as a people were not brought upon you by governments, but by ourselves." (Speech in Toronto, Dec. 18th, 1931.)

"How could present difficulties be overcome?" Premier Bennett proceeded. Some people looked to governments and said they must do it; others looked to churches, and said they must do it; but men and women," he continued, "it will be you and me ourselves, and by no one else. It is what the individual will do that will determine the issue." (Speech to

United Church Missionary Congress,

Oct. 1931.)

"And I am firmly convinced that nothing but the Grace of God will save the world. You may talk about your economic theories, the application of the gold standard, the demonization of silver, balances of trade, exports and imports, but one thing only will save Christianity and that is the Grace of God. That is my conviction." (To United Church Missionary Congress, 1931.)

"The provisions made at the last session of parliament for unemployment and farm relief are proving effective." (Speech from the throne,

Feb. 1932.)

"You enter upon your duties at a time of continuing and universal world forces." (To Trades Congress Delegation, Feb. 1932.)

"This period of trial has shown the Canadian situation to be fundamentally sound." (Speech from the throne

Feb. 1932.)

"You are successfully meeting difficult domestic problems; conditions are gradually improving." (Speech from the throne, Feb. 1932.)

There you are, fellow Canucks, take your choice!

What Shall We Name the Baby?

A SYMPOSIUM BY INTERESTING PEOPLE OF TODAY

CONDUCTED BY WILLIAM A. LEWIN

To select a suitable name for each baby that comes into the world is, indeed, an absorbing problem. Nearly 2,000,000 new babies were born last year. And yet there are less than 1,000 names to choose from. Parents search telephone directories for suggestions. Shall we create some interesting new names?

I have a notion that two names are enough and the general sound of them when put together should be good.

Mrs. Gibson's name was Irene Langhorne, so I gave my daughter those two names and my son the last name (Langhorne).

DEGENERATIVE DISEASES

It is generally known that there has been a very definite increase in the average expectancy of life but it is not so generally understood that this increase is the result of a tremendous reduction in the number of infant deaths, the practical elimination of such diseases as typhoid fever, and through preventive measures and better methods of treatment, a marked decrease in other diseases, of which diphtheria is an example.

The increase in the average expectancy of life means that a much larger number of those who are being born reach adult years. There is little or no increase in the expectancy of life of those who have reached their fiftieth birthday.

Naturally, when more persons are reaching middle age, there is an increase in the diseases which occur at that period of life. But, making due allowance for the fact, there appears to be an actual increase in the degenerative diseases of middle life.

Chronic diseases of the heart, arteries and kidneys are grouped together as degenerative diseases. The reason for their being so grouped is that these diseases arise out of the same causes, and so are frequently found to occur in the same individual. The wearing out of the vital organs is the natural accompaniment of advancing years. The premature wearing out, or degeneration in middle life, is simply a premature old age. We must go through life, using the same body machinery with which we started out. Worn parts cannot be replaced, so we must prevent undue wear and tear if the body machine is to last the natural span of years.

The degenerative diseases occur early when the vital organs have been subjected to abuse, to undue strain or to injury. The result is seldom seen immediately, and so the symptoms are rather apt to be ignored.

Over-indulgence in food or drink throws a severe strain upon the eliminative organs, which, if continued or if frequently repeated, will wear these organs out. The poisons which germs give off, either during the attack of an acute communicable disease, or in the process of chronic poisoning from a focal infection, such as diseased teeth, damage the tissues making up the vital organs.

It appears that the prevention of the degenerative diseases rests upon the proper care of the body. This means the avoidance of the undue strains which follow upon errors in diet, or over-indulgence; keeping the body fit and running smoothly by attention to diet, fresh air, rest, exercise and elimination; being careful not to subject the body to the damaging effects of germ poisons by avoiding communicable diseases if possible, and, in every case, treating them properly if they do occur; removing focal infection.

The early discovery of degenerative changes through the periodic health examination will enable the individual to so adjust his life that his days may be prolonged.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 121 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

INITIAL SHIPMENTS OF HALIBUT ARE REPORTED

With the opening of the halibut season on the Pacific Coast last week the Eastward movement of this delicious fish, commenced with five cars travelling over Canadian National Railways from Prince Rupert to New York and Brooklyn. Owing to bad weather conditions, few boats returned to the mainland during the first week but from now on shipping of fresh halibut to the Prairies and Eastern markets is expected to be continuous.

ROUSING WELCOME GIVEN WORLD HOCKEY CHAMPIONS ON RETURN FROM CONQUESTS

When Canada's Olympic hockey champions, the Winnipeg, returned a few days ago to the Manitoba capital after their conquest of the amateur hockey titans of the world, they were accorded a wildly enthusiastic welcome by the home-town supporters. Thousands of Winnipeg's most national citizens forgot decorum as they tossed hats in the air, thumped each other on the back and shouted themselves hoarse in honor of the champions. Long lines of impressive floats and gaily decorated cars participated in an enormous parade that proceeded through crowded streets from the Canadian National station to the Amphitheatre rink, where the Winnipeg were officially welcomed by civic and government officials. (1) Hockey champions. (2) Frank Frederickson, captain of former Olympic champions, congratulating Bill Cockburn (right), captain of the victorious Winnipeg. (3) Champions (top) passing through station on arrival home. (4) Champions getting an enthusiastic welcome in front of the station.

and temperature — and cultural methods. The total amounts of plant food elements contained in the soil may be considered as "potential" fertility; and the rate at which this store of potential plant food may be drawn upon and made available to crops will be dependent largely on conditions of tillage and season, nitrification, etc.

Plant food may be said to exist in the soil in two forms though no sharp line of demarcation can be drawn between them. By far, the larger proportion exists in a condition insoluble in the soil-moisture and is therefore not assimilable by crops. A very small proportion of the total plant food is present in a water-soluble condition and it is this extremely small percentage which nourishes the crop. This may be termed "available" plant food. The conversion of the insoluble stores of plant food of the soil into forms which can be readily taken up by the plant, proceeds very slowly and it is the supply of this available plant food which controls to a great extent the fertility of the soil.

"Burglary lady, committed early last Friday morning."

"Well," said the lady "you've got the wrong man. I remember well that he came home about fifteen minutes after ten last Thursday night, and that he didn't leave the house until next day."

"Why are you so sure that he was in the house all of the night?"

"Because—well, if you must know I sneaked into his room at about one o'clock in the morning to see if—to see if—"

"See if what?" hotly barked the detective.

"Well, to see if he had any more money in his pockets. He had given me seventeen dollars and forty cents earlier in the evening, but he owed me a lot more than that for board and room. So I sneaked into his room while he was asleep and searched his pockets. I didn't find any money. But I did find a nice gold watch in his vest pocket. I took the watch. But I put his old watch, a silver one which I had taken away from him that day, back in his pocket. You see, he—"

"Shut up you blasted idiot!" Squeint Horson had at last found his voice—too late. And how well he recalled now that he had been very careful that fateful morning not to turn on the light in his room. He had merely felt the vest pocket on the outside to make sure that the watch was there. It was—the wrong watch!

"HE SAW A MISTAKE IN THE LOCAL PAPER"

We made a mistake in last week's issue of the Sentinel. A good subscriber told us about it. The same day there was a letter in our post-office box that didn't belong to us. We called for ninety-eight over the telephone and got 198. We asked for a spool of No. 50 thread and when we got home found it was No. 60. The train was reported 30 minutes late. We arrived at the depot twenty minutes after the train had one. We got our milk bill and there was a mistake of ten cents in our favor. We felt sick and the doctor said we were eating too much meat. We hadn't tasted meat for two months. The garage man said the jitney was missing because it needed a new timer. We cleaned the spark plugs and its running fine ever since. Yes, we made a mistake in last week's issue of the paper.—Kansas Sentinel.

GAVE AWAY 100 MILLION

ROCHESTER, N.Y.—The United States mourns the loss of George Eastman, industrial giant and philanthropist, who gave away during his life time five times as many millions as he had when he died by his own hand. He explained his final act in a terse statement that his work was done.

The genius of photography, whose fortune at the time of his death was estimated in reliable quarters at $30,000,000, shot himself through the heart in his sick room at his mansion here. He was 77. During his life Eastman accumulated about $130,000,000, friends said.

THE HOME GARDEN CANADIAN GARDEN SERVICE FOR 1932

PAPER MULCH

Paper mulch in the vegetable garden is now passed the experimental stage and results obtained at both private and Government places would indicate that under certain conditions this new method of hurrying growth has some decided advantages. The paper is quite similar to the ordinary black building kind, though it is tougher, so that it will stand a fair amount of traffic and weathering. It may be obtained from practically any seedman in different widths to suit the particular vegetable being grown. After the soil is thoroughly prepared for seeding, the paper is fastened down with long home-made staples of cheap black wire, between the rows, with only an inch or so of space between strips for the seed. In the case of tomatoes, cabbage, and other plants, these are inserted in holes punched in the paper, and those vegetables planted in hills are handled in the same way. This mulch, not only keeps down practically all weed growth but it also heats up the soil and stimulates very quick and very early growth. Any one who has laid his hand on a tarpaper roof when the sun is shining will understand the principle upon which this new method of gardening is based. After early crops of peas, spinach and head lettuce have been used, later things may be brought on while the paper is in place.

Sweet Peas

Most of the difficulty in growing good sweet peas is due to late planting. For best, or even satisfactory results, these flowers must be sown just as early in the spring as it is possible to dig the ground. In most parts of the country, this will mean March or early April. The very finest blooms are produced in those sections of Canada where the ground is high and the nights cool, although with the proper method this flower may be grown almost anywhere. It must make its growth during the early cool weather and the root system must go deep down into the soil. Dig a trench about a foot wide and two feet deep, and into this put a six-inch layer of decayed leaves, well rotted manure or other material, and on top two inches of fine garden soil. The seed is planted in this, about three inches apart and an inch deep, and as growth starts the trench is gradually filled in, in order to encourage a very deep root development. At least three feet of climbing support in the form of brush, strings, or poultry netting, should be provided. Soak thoroughly in water during dry weather, and it is a good thing to give one application of liquid manure, or garden commercial fertilizer dissolved in water, during the early stages of growth. Blooming should start in July and if one wants to have this continue until frost, pick the flowers daily, making absolutely sure that no seed pods are allowed to develop.

Seed

Seed is the very foundation of good gardens, and about the only factor over which the owner has absolute control. As the cost in any case is but a few cents there should be no temptation to sacrifice quality but only the very best should be used, and this obtained from Canadian sources in order that one gets seeds selected with Canadian conditions in mind. The use of seed saved from the home garden cannot be recommended, as this is almost sure to be very mixed. Unless one goes to the trouble of screening individual flowers from bees and insects, and cross-pollinating is absolutely impossible to predict mixing of colors in flowers and of types in vegetables. Then too in order to secure earliness and quality, it is often necessary that seed be secured from a district where the season is much longer than our own.

Lawn Repairs

Early Spring is the proper time to attend to those bare spots in the lawn. One can sometimes re-seed these by sowing during one of the last snow storms. In this case, no cultivation is used, the melting snow carrying the seed into the soil. If we leave the work until later, we should stir up the bare spots thoroughly with a rake, sprinkle liberally with a mixture of good lawn grass seed, roll or pound thoroughly, and cover with a bit of brush or poultry netting to keep the birds away. At this time, too, an application of good commercial fertilizer will act as a spring tonic. Most of the trouble with weeds in a lawn, traces to starved conditions. Good healthy well-fed grass will crowd out most weeds but the other kind is not in a position to offer much resistance.

SOIL FERTILITY EXPLAINED

"Soil fertility may be defined as the crop-producing power of the soil states Frank T. Shutt, M.A., D.Sc., Dominion Chemist at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. "It depends on the plant food content of the soil, and on such factors as the physical condition of the soil, climate and seasonal conditions—moisture

BABY FRETFUL, RESTLESS?

Look to this cause

When your baby fusses, tosses and seems unable to sleep restfully, look for one common cause, doctors say. Constipation. To get rid quickly of the accumulated wastes which cause restlessness and discomfort, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Castoria, you know, is made specially for children's delicate needs. It is a pure vegetable preparation; contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. It is so mild and gentle you can give it to a young infant to relieve colic. Yet it is as effective for older children. Castoria's regulative help will bring relaxed comfort and restful sleep to your baby. Keep a bottle on hand. Genuine Castoria always has the name:
